On the Day of Atonement the priests in Israel are very busy, especially the high priest. First, the high priest offers up a bull for a sin offering for himself. Then he offers up a ram for a burnt offering for Israel. He then puts on his linen clothing to take the blood of the bull for a sin offering into the most holy place.

He then takes two male goats from the congregation of Israel. He then casts lots for these two goats. One lot is for YHWH and the other lot is for the goat of removal. The goat that is for YHWH is for a sin offering. The other goat is presented alive before YHWH and Aharon lays his hands upon its head and confesses over it all the sins of Israel. This goat is then sent into the wilderness.

When Aharon takes the blood of the goat for the sin offering into the Mishkan, no one is to be inside the tent of meeting. Everyone must leave the tent of meeting. No one may enter into the tent of meeting until Aharon comes out of the mishkan.

After Aharon takes the blood of the sin offering for Israel into the most holy place and puts the blood on the mercy seat, he is to wash himself in water and put on his high priestly garments.
