D'varim

(words)

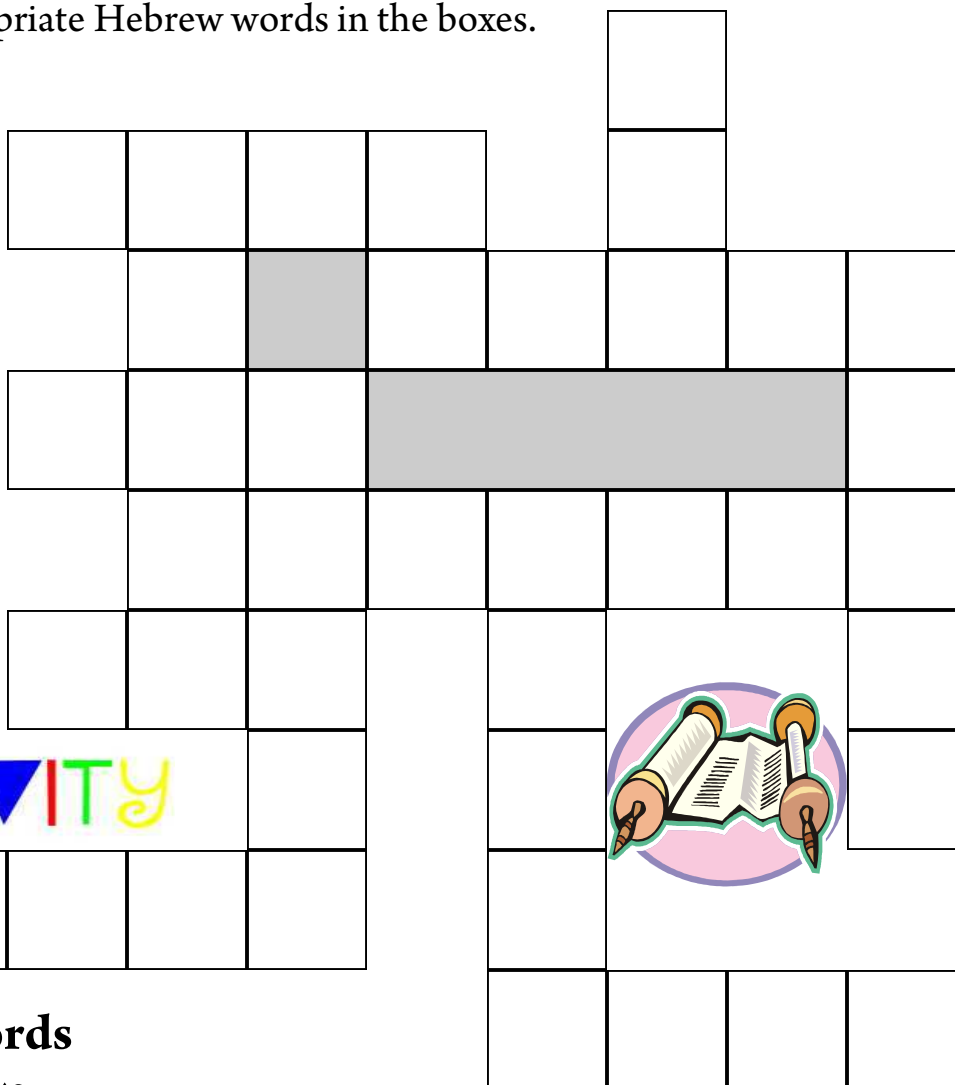

YHWH has told Moshe that it is time for him to die. So Moshe speaks to Israel and reminds them of all that has happened to them and all that YHWH has done for them and especially all that YHWH has commanded them through him.

Moshe reminds Israel of the burden that they were to him and how he appointed over them officers and judges to help carry the burden of the whole nation. Moshe charged the judges with doing righteousness and that they were not to take bribes or render decisions of unfairness, but all decisions were to be based upon the commandments of YHWH.

Moshe reminds them how they had to wander in the wilderness for thirty-eight years because they listened to the evil report of the ten spies instead of listening to the good report of the two spies Yehoshua and Calev. Israel believed the evil report because of the Anakim (giants).

Moshe explains to Israel how YHWH had formerly destroyed the Anakim from before the Ammoni and Esau and they possessed their land. Moshe was teaching them that they did not have to be afraid of the Anakim for just like He did for those, so He would do for them.
