The Children of Yisrael were complaining. They were tired of manna and wanted to eat meat. Moshe asked YHWH to send some meat, and YHWH told him to tell the people that He would send them meat for a month, until it came out their noses and made them feel sick.

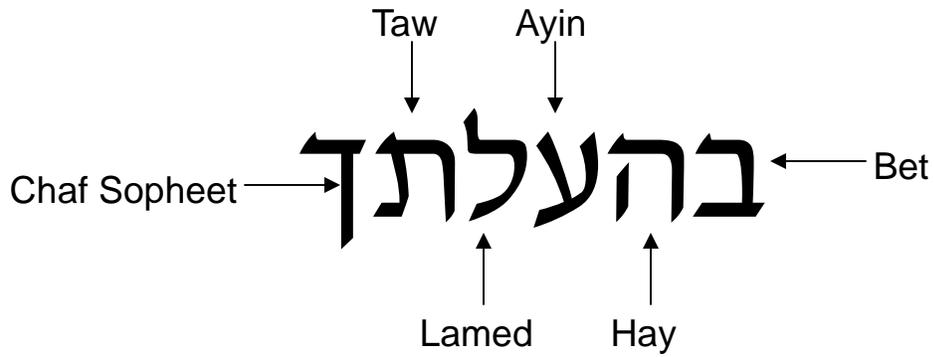

A wind blew some quail into the camp. The people gathered them for two days, and while the meat was still in their mouths, YHWH killed some of them.

Aharon and Miriam were speaking against Moshe, because he had married a Cushite woman, and YHWH chose to speak to him, instead of them. YHWH heard them and told them to go before the Tent of Meeting. He told them that Moshe was the one that He trusted in the camp, and that was why He had chosen him. When He left, Miriam was struck with tzara'at and had to stay outside of the camp for seven days. When seven days had passed, the Children of Yisrael journeyed to the Wilderness of Paran.
