YHWH told Moshe about the different offerings. There were burnt-offerings, meal-offerings, peace-offerings, sin-offerings, and guilt-offerings.

A person could offer a burnt-offering, a meal-offering, or a peace-offering for YHWH.

When a person accidentally sinned, they would offer a sin-offering for atonement, so that they could be forgiven. If he made a promise, but did not keep it, he would have to give a sin-offering.

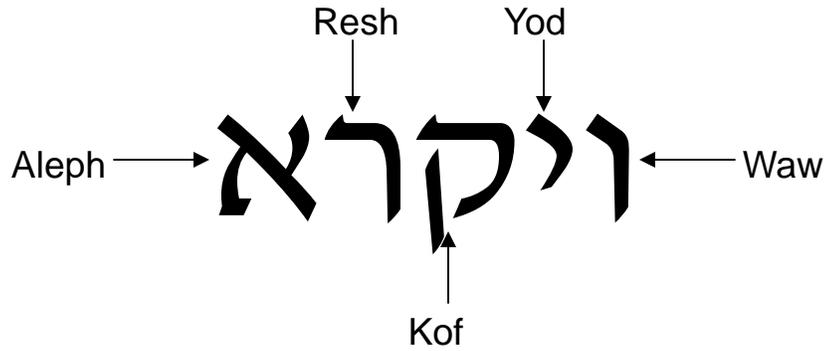

If a person neglected to give offerings to YHWH; or he lied to his fellow about a promise, loan, or robbery; or defrauded his fellow; he would have to give a guilt-offering.

Every offering had to be given with salt.
